CCHS Halls of Fame, Achievement, and Service

Carbondale Community High School paid homage to its leaders, teachers, record-breakers and visionaries this fall with a pair of ceremonies designed to honor the next class of the best and brightest to dot the hallways, offices, playing fields, and bleachers in the history of CCHS. The Athletic Hall of Fame welcomed the second class to its honored spot in school lore with a weekend full of fun and memories August 29 and 30. Meanwhile, the CCHS Education Foundation hosted its second ever Gala event September 21 to induct a new class into its Hall of Service and Hall of Achievement. In all, the CCHSEF recognized the dedication, service and accomplishments of 28 individuals and one entire graduating class - 1940's, which has provided more financial support to the school than any other graduating class in school history. The Hall of Fame ceremony recognized fourteen former athletes, six coaches, three record-breaking teams, and one super-fan as its second class to be inducted. Both nights left those honored and those that came to celebrate the honored with plenty of smiles, stories and memories. Hall of Fame inductee Lisa Knowlton-Mason spoke for many from each event when she said, "It's going to be a night that I'm going to remember for a long time."

for football my freshman year... in the first game, I didn't play well." A man came to Coleman after that game knowing that he was a good announcer. He asked Coleman if he would rather play football or announce all of the games. Coleman handed over his jersey and began announcing. "By [my] sophomore year I was doing play-by-play radio broadcast on WCIL and my career was launched."

His voice was just the beginning of what would become an amazing career. "Everything I needed to get my career going in life came from Carbondale High School," Coleman told the Terrier Times at the CCHS Education Foundation Gala in September. He said that what really helped was having such great math, science, and English teachers, all of which helped him in his future meteorology career.

After graduating high school, Coleman moved from coast to coast working for different news stations, including Good Morning America. Eventually, he was among the creators of The Weather Channel. "Carbondale is the source of my success, CCHS is huge with me... Go Terriers!"

Other Hall of Achievement Inductees are listed on page 6.

Athletic Hall of Fame Inductees

Not only was Doug Woolard inducted to the Carbondale Community High School Hall of Fame as a coach, but he was also a player on the 1966-67 basketball team that is being inducted. Woolard spent 17 years representing the High School, four as a student athlete and then thirteen as a coach/athletic director. During an interview Doug Woolard expressed how honored he felt to be inducted in this class with such great Coaches such as Gary Holda, Reid Martin, and John Cherry. When asked about his feelings toward Carbondale High School he responded, "This place has a very special meaning to me and my family, and it was a very impactful time in our lives."

Doug Woolard talked about his '66-'67 basketball team and about his '67-'68 team that also qualified for state and lost in overtime. He only had good things to say about these teams and the people he played with. In an interview he mentioned his co-captain Lester Taylor and the great memories they made and how successful they were. "Les Taylor is probably as good a basketball player as I've seen yet today."

Doug Woolard had the honor of coaching two of the four basketball players inducted in the first Hall of Fame class and all three of the individual male basketball players being inducted with him into the second class. Woolard talked about the honor it was to coach such talented people and said that he is sure that in the future more of the players he got the opportunity to coach will be getting inducted.

After leaving his hometown, Carbondale, Woolard went on to work in athletic director positions at Washington State, St. Louis University, University of Southern Florida, and he did return at one point to be the AD of Southern Illinois University in Carbondale.

Lisa Knowlton-Mason was a three sport athlete when she attended Carbondale Community High School. Graduating in 1990, she participated in basketball, volleyball, and track. Inducted into the Hall of Fame in 2014 for her accomplishments in basketball, Mason demonstrated that devotion, discipline, and dedication serve as pillars for success in both school and life. "You're only as good as the people that surround you. I was surrounded with great coaches... we had a wonderful team and I think we could still go out and take that court today and probably hold our own." During her time at CCHS, Mason earned a total of eleven varsity letters. She also was awarded 2nd team in all-state for basketball. Inductees into this year's Hall of Fame were announced at the Carbondale-Murphysboro football game on August 29. "It's such an honor and a privilege to even be... inducted into the class... It's gonna be a night that I'm going to remember for a long time."

Seth Smith, class of 1993, was another inductee into the second Hall of Fame class this fall. Smith was a two sport athlete who participated in basketball and football. He excelled at both sports, but he attended the University of Michigan on a football scholarship. Smith still ranks sixth in the IHSA record book for career touchdown catches with 40 over his storied Terrier career. Now, Smith manages his own consulting firm in Los Angeles, California with high profile clients including several NFL players and actor Kevin Hart. Even with a resume like his he still said,

"there still isn't anything like coming back to CCHS."

- make our students who they are today. They were recognized at the Education Foundation's Gala in September. They have shown leadership, financial support, time and effort to the students and all of District 165. This year Hall of Service inductees were nothing but the best. The inductees included:
- Virginia Appuhn started teaching in 1990 and is now retired from CCHS. She ensured that the school led the way in technological development.
 - Barbara Bennett was an influential member on the Board of Education and was the second longest serving member. Many of her hours were also put towards making sure CCHS had the best Fine Arts program.
 - Mary Boyle, 'Ma' Boyle as her students know her, poured her unique skills into the theater department at CCHS for over 30 years. Boyle was also very influential in many productions of the Carbondale Stage Company, which she helped found.
 - The Class of 1940 has provided CCHS with more financial support than any other class, ever. Their contributions have impacted past students, and also many of the students attending CCHS today.
 - Dr. James Crouse served as a local physician in the City of Carbondale. Throughout his years he provided physicals free of charge to CCHS athletes. His revolutionary practice and his financial support to CCHS over the years have helped to make CCHS athletics what it is today.
 - Harold and Jane Dycus were extremely devoted to CCHS. As a couple they served as co-presidents of the athletic booster club and helped found several fundraisers that have benefited CCHS.
 - Jake Goro has been one of the strongest financial supporters CCHS has ever had. Goro served on the committee which founded the Carbondale Holiday Tournament. His legacy lives on through the Holiday Tournament and the CCHS students.
 - Amber Hanson enjoyed a long and distinguished career as a school nurse. Hanson served as a member of the CCHS Education Foundation.
 - Charles Hines, who was the attorney general for the City of Carbondale for many years, served as the CCHS attorney for several years making sure the school was always compliant. His legal advice and guidance was very helpful in the establishment of the foundation.
 - Gary Holda is a retired teacher and coach from CCHS. He is a very hands-on coach and always runs with his athletes. Holda is a valued financial supporter to the foundation.
 - Margaret Hollis Handy, a devoted teacher, not only worked hard for her students but served as a department chair and also the school's principal. After many years, she retired as the school's Superintendent. The previous Learning Center on east campus was named in her honor.
 - Charles Leming spent many years as a government teacher for CCHS. He ensured the honors students were given the opportunity to serve in Washington D.C. and to this day students are still able to serve there over spring break.
 - Barbara Levine, CCHS graduate, served as a Board member for over 20 years, ten of those as president. Levine was president of many committees before and after her work on the school board. She worked many hours on the referendum to build the new school which all students attend today.
 - Reid Martin started out as a teacher and coach at CCHS. After coaching football, basketball, and baseball he went on to become the athletic director and finished his time at CCHS as the Superintendent. Martin is a vocal supporter and a founding member of the Holiday Tournament.
 - Jennifer Stanley is an outstanding retired teacher who was more than devoted to her students. She was an advisor and trainer in the CCHS lifesavers program. Stanley also served in founding the Freshman Orientation Program, SeniorFest, and CCHS Student Mentors.
 - James "Jet" Tarr, PH.D., taught in CCHS's business department and was always known for his sense of humor. Tarr and his students were able to bring the first Snack Shack to CCHS. He was the advisor for both the Key Club and FBLA for many years. After retiring, Tarr went on to complete his Ph.D. and taught at SIU.
 - Jim West was the owner and founder of West Bus Service, the official bus for CCHS. Mr. West ensured that all sports teams had a ride to their events and provided free services to the school.

Students Involved with the Creation of Newsletter

As a project, students of the CCHS A/V Journalism Class design the Education Foundation newsletter. Creating the foundation newsletter gives the class a valuable hands-on experience that they are able to translate into the business world.

Students relate how classroom activities such as writing, photography, scanning photos, editing, and layout apply to the real world.
